General Hancock is a farmer-that is he owns farms. He has two in Mississippi, a half a dozen in Missouri, and more than half a dozen in Minnesota.

The Hon. John Conley, member of the Assembly from the Third District, is a member of the joint committee on conference in regard to the apportionment.

According to Postmaster General Howe, flour can be sent through the mails without being put in metalic boxes. Why not melude snuff and codfish in the list

Mrs. F. W. Meyer, wife of the proprietor of the Meyers house, at Jefferson, became deeply grieved over some domestic difficulty, and jumped in Rock river and drowned herself.

The Senate bill providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature has been laid over till the first of March, to give the Supreme Court, in the mean time, an opportunity to decide on the question raised by Senator Hudd in demanding $500 for the present session.

"The matter of legislating all the Democrats out of districts is only a small portion of the work before the apportionment committee."-Madison Democrat. Probably the Republicans will be more charitable than that. But the Democrat will remember that when the Democrats in Ohio tried to do the same thing, and in a measure accomplished their purpose, the Democrat did not complain.

By being a little "too previous" with the gas the other evening in Brooklyn, the believers in that humbug-Spiritualism-received a severe shock. Mrs. Crindle-Reynolds, the great expounder of the doctrine of materialization, was giving some exhibition of her power, when the gas was suddenly turned on at the wrong moment, and she was revealed to the members of the chramed circle with one mask on her face and another at arms length from which fell in airy folds a light fabric known as illusion. She was about to "materialize" two friendly spirits meeting after a separation. Naturally, under the circumstances, she did not finish the perform-

The Omaha company had a clear field in the land grant contest, the bill having passed the Assembly by a vote of 84 to 12, to which the Madison Democrat adds: "There was one or two trifling amendments to it which will have to be concurred in by the Senate and then the bill will go to the Governor. It is stated that upward of two hundred of the Air Line laborers are still at Superior await. ing pay and living right handsomely at the expense of the Governor's telegram so that it is probable the Governor will not wait a great while about signing the bill, and it is also probable the Omaha company will not be long in seeing that these fellows are paid and set to work Backed by a powerful public sentiment, Congress will at last try to do something with the question of polygamy. It is not an easy matter to deal with. In the first place it was found to be utterly impossible to get a jury consisting in part of Mormons to bring in a verdict of guilty in polygamy cases; and when this plan failed, Congress countenanced the attempt of the United States Marshal in Utah Territory, to pack juries so a as to exclude Mormons. This scheme was ill-advised, and of course was not practical. But the great trouble in dealing with polygamy arises in another direction. The law makes the offense consist in marrying a second wife when the first is living, and not in hving in notoriously polygamous relations. It is therefore necessary for the prosecuting attorney to prove the first marriage, and then to prove that a marriage ceremony was gone through with in forming the alliance with the second wife. It is impossible to produce eviof the first marriage and if this is done the difficulty of substantiating the second is usually inseparable because Mormon marriages are performed secretly in the Endowment House, no record is made of them, and the witnesses present can not be got to

It will be remembered by our readers that the Gazette said some time ago that during President Grants administration an effort was made to strike out polygamy by means of a statute against "lewd cohabitation," and that nothing of hit because juries impanelled in the usual way refused to convict the persons put upon trial. The wisdom of this so-called Mormon crusade was questioned at the time, and was nothing more than an attempt to whip the devil around the stump. The thing to aim the blow of the law at is the system of polygamous marriages, which is the root of the evil. It is well known that the scandalous immorality of "plural households" would not long exist if no new polygamous unions were contracted. Of course, how to stop these marriages is the thing, and what Congress should do is not an easy question to set tle. It has been doubted whether Con' gress has the power, by ordinary means, to break up the abominable institution The evil of polygamy seems to be too powerful to be extirpated by the ordinary operations of a Territorial government and Federal courts. It has been suggested that it would be better to have the evil of a tew years of arbitrary government for Utah, if that is the only remedy, than the greater evil of the continued growth of Mormonism.

SOTELDO'S FUNERAL.

Washington, Feb. 15-The funeral of A. M. Soteldo, Jr., took place this afternoon from the late residence in Iowa Circle. Every available space in the lower part of the house was occupied, and many were compelled to remain outside-Many costly and beautiful floral emblems were appropriately arranged about the casket. A large column and cross from the Baltimore American, with which journal Soteldo was formerly connected, attracted special notice. Besides the professional associates of Soteldo, nearly every Washington bureau but the roughs got but $30 of one and being represented, there was a number of $15 of the other. The latter had his Representatives of Congress and other money mostly concealed in his boot.

In leaving the depot in Chicago she thrust her head out of the car window to bid a friend goodby, and continued to look back until the depot was some distance behind. The draft affected her throat. In Detroit she was imprudent in driving out. The story is that her livery bill there was $55. The cold first felt after leaving Chicago was greatly aggrivated, and she arrived in this city on Sunday suffering severely, and has not been out of her room since. There have been several rumors afloat, and they hvae had wide circulation, that her indisposition was due to other causes than those assigned, but they seem to have no foundation. The date of her reappearance in New York has been postponed from Tuesday of next week to Monday of the week following. Tickets were bought at high prices to hear her here, and should she fail to sing, the festival board will have difficulty in satisfying the purchasers. She is attended by one physician of the homeopathic and one of the allopathic school.

A HORRIBLE TALE.

ROCK RAPIDS. Ia., Feb. 15 .- There are new developments in the testimony before the Coroner,s jury at Sibley, on the murder of John Lanahan. Anna, daughter of the murdered man, confessed today that Maggie, her older sister, did the shooting of her father, and that she Anna) afterwards went out doors and broke the light of glass to make it appear that the shot was fired through the window from the outside. A young man named Birch is under arrest on suspicion as accessory to the crime. Public opinion is that further developments will implicate the wife of the murdered man. At the coroner's inquest to-day, Maggie, the oldest daughter, confessed to the shooting of her father Saturday night. She also implicated her mother, her sister, and Anna's lover, Birch. Maggie says it was agreed between them all to put the old man out of the way. Birch furnished the revolver, which the old woman kept hid for six weeks previous to the murder waiting for a chance. Lanahan had just returned from a farmers' club-meeting, and was about to sit down and read, when Maggie stepped behind him and fired, killing him instantly. She then arranged the body in a way so as to appear as if some one had shot him through the window, while the younger sister (Anna) went out and broke the window. The old lady then took the revolver and hid it in the hen-house, where it was found to-day in accordance with Maggie's statement, Birch is in jail in the girls woman and two be brought over from Riverview, where they are now in custody. Great excite-ment prevails, and Birch is fearful that the people will lynch him. Maggie was

Authors Not in Their Works. It is unfortunate for those who think with Mr. Pope,

The proper study of mankind is man, that few authors put themselves into their works. No one knows what Shakspeare thought or believed. Byron's poetry is disfigured with cynical sneers at the world and with contemptuous smiles at its judgments. But Byron, the man, was over-sensitive, and listened at the world's keyhole to learn what it thought of kim.

The reader of Thomson's "Seasons" would scarcely think he wrote his descriptions of "meek-eyed morn-mother of dews," in bed, because he was too lazy to rise and dress himself.

Yet, to the undiscerning many, the author and the man are one person. Thackeray's wit, for instance, is cynical. His works show the mean side of human nature. He has an eye for repulsive characters. Kind actions are traced to sordid motives. The shams of modern society are congenial themes.

To kindly, cheerful, refined readers his tone is as irritating as the filing of a saw. They reject him as they would a book descriptive of skin diseases. But the friends and foes of Thackeray's novels would alike err should they identify the satirist with the man he was an affectionate husban dulgent father, a generous fr one who has been known to time and money to serve those alged in by contemporaries about the attitudes at which mines, and especially elver mines, are found; and one paragraph, evidently started by a man from the Louisiana lowlands," says that 'scientific men have proved by actual me asurement that most of the great silr mines lie 10,000 feet above the presut sea level, and among the richest are ome 2,000 feet higher still." Job, of he land of Uz, who was doubtless betr versed in geology, mineralogy, metlargy and practical mining than many f the scissors editors who keep the lieve quotation affoat, said: "Surely here is a vein for the silver, and a place r gold where they fine (refine or purify) Rich silver mines have been found s high as 16,000 feet, and many of them of the sea, but it does not foliow that RIDDER GOODS female Pills $1 per box; 6 for $5.

sliver mines are found only at such attitudes. The highest croppings of the famous Comstock are considerably less than 8,000, and the Eberhardt, of White Pine—the richest silver mine in the known world—is barely 9,000 feet above the sea level. The Carthagenian mines of antiquity, which at one time em-ployed 40,000 operatives, were scarcely 5,000 feet high, and the rich mines of Tombstone in Arizona do not attain even so great an altitude. In all the broad mineral region of Nevada, no paying vein of silver ore has ever been found at an altitude of 10,000 feet. It does not follow even that because veins of silver are usually found in the older rocks of offy mountain ranges, they may not also be found in the sandstones and other sedimentary rocks of the valleys, as in the case of Silver Reef, Utah. The speculation as to the "altitude of mines" is all nonsense, for "surely there is a vein for the silver," and that vein is as likely to be found, all other conditions being favorable, at an altitude of 4,000

Claims to Friendship.

as at one of 10,000 feet, -Bodie Free

Perhaps one reason that we complain so bitterly of the fickleness of friends lies in the fact that we confound acquaintanceship with friendship. It is a strong attribute of the mind to hope that which it wishes; and in no particular is it shown more strongly than in estimating by anticipation the friendly feelings toward us of those to whom we may happen to be known. This great error will usually be found to increase in the same ratio as the particular person whose friendly feeling we wish to chall nge is more or less in a higher grade of society than ourselves, and whose means, interest or power is greater than our own. We are, in such cases, apt to lay claims to acts of friendship from those with whom we could only a best boast an acquaintance. But the error goes much farther even than this; for we frequently make the request, not in reference to our own position, but to the power of those from whom we solicit or expect a friendly part. We forget that we have no earthly claim upon em; no reason to expect the slightest sacrifice of their time, interest or even amusement. We think only of our own wishes. What is the consequence? It will be found in the loss of the acquaintance of some one whose notice was flatering; one who felt toward us as much riendly feeling as we had any right to xpect, and who would have been dis posed to award to us as much courtesy and attention, or, one occasion, a much service, as we had any grounds or anticipating. From our own folly, as visits now grow few and far between, nd, from a well-grounded suspicion of repetition of similar arrogant requests, ey gradually cease altogether. We have chilled what friendly feeling did exist toward us by our own folly.

Remartie Duels.

Pads make up almost all the interes of I Forumo du Boisgobey's story. to the first incident the story is the return of one of the Fabien, from a party. He loses in roa , finds himself in an unknown port food Paris (the date is about 1823) ... di ... es a man with a sedan-chair. The man of the sedar-chair says that I's availd brother is within it, and asks l'aiten to help him to carry the patient to a hospital. The good-natured hero consents; the police come up; the other men decamps, and the body of Fabien's cousin is found in the chair. He has been k lled by a sword-thrust in the eye. Next we have an encounter in a fencing room between one of the Swiss Guard and Marcas, the villain, with two of his friends. The weapons are foils, with the buttons removed. The Swiss fights the two others first, and wounds both, in spite of their policy of breaking ground and retreating. When it comes to Marcas' turn, he proposes to fight on the billiard table, that there may be no chance of retreat on either side. He then leaps within hisantagonist's guard, conist is Fabien, the hero. The conditions are that each party mayadvance as he pleases to a spot in the center of the ground. Each has a loaded pistol, and two extra charges. The weapons of course are the old flint locks. Fabien is smoking a cigar. At the first fire both men miss. Marcas' second fire knocks off the hammer of Fabien's pistol. The latter is thus disarmed, and all seems over. The miscreant Marcas begins to mock his victim, loads with great deliberation, and promises, if possible, to kill him with a single shot. The feelings of the reader (if he does not foresee what follows) are nowerfully worked on for Marlows) are powerfully worked on, for Marcas has been killing respectable people, right and left, all through the story. A happy thought occurs to Fabien. He throws open the pan of his flint-lock, and sees that the priming is all right. "You see that you are not disagged." "You see that you are not disarmed," sneers the miscreant Marcas; "If a spark fell from one of the torches, your pistol might still go off." Fabien calmly remarks that he means to kill Marcas, levels his weapon with steady aim, and fires the priming with the lighted end of his cigar. Marcas is shot through the body,

Interesting Scene in a Doctor's Office. Now that the season of small-pox has come and deaths from that terrible disease are chroncled almost daily, it behooves those that wish to preserve their beauty and escape its ravages to at once get vaccinated. Perhaps not one person in a thousand has ever seen the process by which bovine virus is procured. Yesterday a Republican reporter visited the office of Dr. Charles Block at No. 502 North Equation 1 Block, at No. 502 North Fourteenth street, and witnessed the novel proceeding of taking the virus directly from a live calf and vaccinating people instantly with it. It is well known that in the early part of the present century, during a small-pox epidemic in England, Dr. Jenner discovered that vaccination was a preventive of small-pox. He found that during the scourge dairymen were not as succeptible to the disease as others, and upon further investigation found that this was caused by their having become inoculated with bovine virus, by Block, at No. 502 North Fourteenth come inoculated with bovine virus, by their hands coming in contact with the udders of the animals. He then procured some of the virus and began a system of vaccination, and found the results were above his expections. The manner in which it is procured is very complicated and needs a patient and steady hand. Eight days ago Dr. Block bought a healthy heifer calf about seven months old. He scarified the animal in twenty-five or thirty places in the rebovine virus. The calf was then taken and placed in a stable and given the best of food. Yesterday morning the animal was examined and, the vaccination having "taken," it was decided to procure the virus immediately. The calf was led into the office and strapped down on a stout frame about two feet high. She did not seem to manifest the least interest in the proceedings, but when her legs were bound tightly to adjacent rings she made a decided kick.

After the binding operation was completed, Dr. Higgins took a razor and shaved the surface of the udder and its immediate neighborhood smooth. A score of half-healed sores could then be seen, somewhat similar in appearance to the one under like circumstances on hate pickles or no longer be interested in de purceedin's of dis club.—Detroit a human arm. A small surgical instrument, somewhat in the nature of a vise.

was then taken and placed over each seab in succession, the operator tightening and relaxing it at will. When the necessary amount of pressure had been obtained with the instrument, a yellowish liquid was seen to ooze from the sore. The points and quills were then brought in contact with this liquid or virus, and placed aside ready for use. Enough virus is obtained from one scar to vaccinate fifty people if properly distributed. This process was kept up until each scar had been squeezed dry, and enough virus obtained to vaccinate thousands. While the squeezing process was going on, several children, accompanied by their parents, came into the room to be vaccinated. The little ones bared their arms and bravely stood the ordeal. After the arms had been scarified the doctor took a point and placed it in contact with a sore on the udder of the calf, and then instantly placed it on the arms of the children. One little girl thirteen years old, desired to be vaccinated on the leg, and the doctor, picking out a soft spot near the knee, accomplished her object. All persons vaccinated in this manner need have no fear of contracting any hereditary taints in the veins, and if it does not take they may rest assured that they are not susceptible to the disease. Heifers have to be vaccinated the same as humans before the vaccine matter can be procured, but not with human virus, but that taken from some other bovine. It has frequently been found, though, that some cows become inoculated through a natural state, which must have been the case with cows used by Dr. Jenner. Taking virus from a human being and inoculating a calf is called retrovaccination, and the virus thus obtained from the animal is very weak and not always reliable. This is only done in extreme necessity, and where vaccine matter can not otherwise be procured. The cold weather will undoubtedly increase the number of small-pox cases, and there is good ground for the belief that not more than one-half the cases are reported daily. Yesterday Dr. Washington was reprimanded by the Board of Health for intentionally suppressing a case, and he is but one of many physicians who do likewise. If it became whispered about that a popular physician was attending a case of small-pox, his other patients would positively inform him that his services in their behalf would be no longer required. This is one of the inducements which physicians have for wishing to suppress small-pox.—St. Louis Republican.

Pork Keeps Its Place.

Great alarm was manifested a few months ago by the raisers and shippers of pork when the news was received that American pork products were excluded from several European countries. It was thought that this action by itself would result in lowering the price of pork very considerably, and that it would so prejudice people in this country that there would be less pork consumed at home. Some farmers who had raised many hogs concluded that it was time to substitute cattle and sheep for them, as hereafter beef and mutton would take the place of pork on American tables. For some time sensational reports were circulated in our own papers about the injurious effects of eating pork. But the alarm they excited was soon over. The market, too, very quickly adjusted itself, and pork, hams, bacon, and lard were higher than before. It must be evident to every careful observer that pork-raising will be profita-ble in the future as it has been in the past. The foreign outlet for pork may be closed and remain closed for all time, but the vast outlet for it at home will remain open. Nearly all persons relish beef and poultry, and many do mutton, but for a steady diet the great majority of American citizens prefer pork. Pork is the favorite meat food of persons who work, and we are a working people.

There are many things that commend pork to persons of small means who work for their living, as most Americans do. The dressed hog may be cut and cooked almost without loss. Even the head, feet and tail, make excellent food. The proportion of bone in pork is very small compared with beef or mutton. The meat is highly flavored, and may be eaten with relish without condiments. Different parts of the hog have different flavors, and afford variety. Pork can be cooked easier and cheaper than beef and mntton, as it contains an abundance of fat. Butter is not necessary to cook or flavor it. The fat extracted by the cooking process affords one of the best substitutes for butter. On these and many more accounts pork is more economical than beef or mutton. The value of beef and mutton is greatly impaired by any process of curing, but this is not the case with pork. The flavor of pork is improved by the employment of salt and smoke. Pork can be more advantageously stored away than any other kind of meat. Most laboring persons desire hot meat for supper, and pork can be easily cooked by frying it in its own fat. Pork is more easily transported than beef or mutton, and is more easily preserved. It is preferred for food by lumbermen, It is preferred for food by lumbermen, miners and all other persons who camp out and do their own cooking. The My. or R. M. BOARDMAN, 309 Broadway. The pig is as do-cile as any animal kept on a farm, with the exception of the dog, and his repu-tation for obstinacy, like that of the mule, is largely owing to the bad manner in which he is brought up.—Chicago

-The clover-seed midge, Cecidomya trifolii, the insect which for a few years past has committed more or less damage in the clover fields of New York, has made its appearance along the lines of the Canada Southern Railway and elsewhere in the Dominion clover fields, doing considerable damage the past season. This pest is of the same family as the Hessian fly, which it closely resembles. It lays its eggs in September on the heads of clover, and the perfect fly appears in June, lays its eggs, and the larvæ from these last are what cause the damage. The larvæ are of a bright orange-red color and measure less than an eighth of an inch in length. The one remedy appears to be to stop growing clover, though it is reported that the cutting of the first crop of clover somewhat earlier than usual, about the time the first heads are forming and then not attempting to get a seed crop, has had the effect of interrupting its ravages.

bear came swimming through the driztunately he could not be pursued. The fog lasted in dismal thickness until 1 of age, and is a magnificent looking o'clock in the morning of the 11th, when man." we once more saw the hills and dales of discovered a lead that enabled us to approach within perhaps fifteen miles of the nearest portion of the coast. At times we thought ourselves much nearer, when the light falling favorably would bring out many of the smaller features, such as the subordinate ridges on the faces of the mountains and hills, and the small dimpling hollows with their different shades of color, furrows that seemed the channels of small streams and the peculiar rounded outlines due to glacial action. Then pushing eagerly through the huge, drifting masses toward the nearest cape, judging by the distinctness of its features, it would suddenly seem to retreat again into the blue distance, and some other point catching the sunlight would be seen rising grandly across the jagged hummocky ice plain, relieved against the blue shadowy portions to right and left as a background. It was not long, nowever, after tracing one lead after another, and coming to a stand-still with the ship's prow against ice of enormous thickness, before we were forced to the conclusion that all efforts made hereabout would now be vain. The ice did not seem to have been broken or moved in any way for years. We turned, therefore, and made our way back to open water with difficulty and steamed along the edge of the pack to the northeastward. After a few hours' run we found the ice more promising, showing traces of having been well crushed and pounded, enabling us to bear gradually in toward the land twenty miles in length. Next morning, steaming ahead once more to the end of our water lane, we were rejoiced to find that though there was now about eight or ten miles of ice separating us from the shore it was less firmly packed, and our little vessel made a way through it without difficulty until mith & Son's Clothing Store, Janesville, Wis- tle wide open, the barrier was forced, and by 10 o'clock a. m. the Corwin was length from a dry gravel bar stretching in front of the mouth of a river. The long battle we had fought with the ice was now fairly won, and neither the engine nor the hull seemed to have suffered any appreciable damage from the terrible shocks and strains they had undergone. Going inland, along the left bank of the river, we found it much larger than it at first appeared to be. There was no snow left on the lowlands or any of the hills or mountains in sight, excepting the remnants of heavy drifts; nevertheless it was still about seventy-five yards wide, twelve feet deep and was flowing on with a clear, stary current at a speed of about three miss an hour. While the snow is melting it must be at least two hundred yards wide and twenty feet deep, and its sources lie well back in the interior of the country. Not the slightest trace, however, could we find along the river, along the shore or on the bluff to the northeastward of the Jeannette party or of any human inhabitants. A land more severely solitary could hardly be found anywhere on the face of the globe.—John Muir, in the San Francisco Bulletin.

The Romantic History of an Indian Captive.

Gen. John R. Baylor furnishes the San Antonio (Texas) Express with the following incident, connected with his Rivera, whom he rescued from the Com-anches a quarter of a century ago: "In 1856 I was United States Indian note on my table from a boy who asked afterward the boy walked into my office with a bunch of turkey feathers fastened father was a Spaniard and lived in the mining town of Tapio, in the State of Durango, Mexico. He spoke Spanish and also Comanche. I didn't believe that he had written the note, and, to try him, asked him to sit down at my desk and show me how he could write. He wrote a beautiful hand for a boy. and the men in charge of the mules, and claimed to own the boy, and when he replied that I could not, and I told him I would or we would fight. He said there to protect the Comanche camp. While there Chief Catemase, of the Comanches, who had heard of the object of my visit, came to see me and said that he wanted no trouble between myself and "Darling, wake up and stop snor-the Indians, and that if I would give up ing," said a Detroit woman to her hus-$100 worth of goods I could get the boy. band I gave him an order on the sutler and he was given the goods, and the boy asked, as he half raised up in bed. was turned over to me. Wrangell Land hopefully near. We Indian Criminals on Their Way to Dakota for Trial.

Deputy United States Marshal Charles A. Gray, of Dakota, passed through St. Paul yesterday, en route for Yankton, having in charge Brave Bear, a petty chief of the Yanktonnais tribe of Sioux, who is as thorough-faced a villain as ever scalped a prostrate body or stole a rival's wife, and he is particularly expert in the latter accomplishment, by the way. The doughty Sioux was shackled and hand-cuffed, and the precautions were wisely taken, for he is noted as much for his escapes as his murders. The writer has known him for some years, and is constrained to admit that he knows of nothing to his credit. His appearance is singularly in his favor, as his features are regular and his smile pleasant; but give him a taste of liquor or a scent of blood and he becomes a devil incarnate. He was wont to boast, when counting his coups in the dances of his tribe at Standing Rock, of having exterminated a family at St. Joseph, Pembina County, and would gloat over the neatness and dispatch with which he buried his knife in the bodies of his victims, three of whom were children. He speaks a little English-that is, he will do so when apart from all other Sioux-and told the writer one day, when he was in a confidential mood, that he was naturally kind-hearted, but when he had taken whisky, or when excited by battle, some wicked spirit took possession of him and made him irresponsibly savage. He was arrested for the St. Joseph murder, but broke jail and joined his tribe at Standing Rock. He was afterward rearrested by Capt. Tom Custer, at Fort Lincoln, but again escaped, and did not turn up for some time. In 1877 Lieut. Kislingbury put him in the guard-house at Fort Yates, but he again got away, and this time, it we were within two miles of the shore, there wasn't grub enough for him there, is presumed, joined the hostiles. But we were within two indeeds by the gular Office Hours 9 A. M. to 12 M; 7:30 P. M. to, gular Office Hours 9 A. M. to 12 M; 7:30 P. Not many months shooting the poor fellow as he stood in ago he returned to the vicinity of Standing Rock, and Louis Agard, Henry Martin and other ranchmen, catching him in the act of stealing horses, corralled him. Louis Agard snapped a pistol at his head six times, but none of the cartriages would explode-more's the pity -and after sober second thought the captors concluded to take him to Bismarck and turn him over to the United States authorities. This they did, and he was recently put on trial at Fargo for Johnson's murder, but the Court deciding that it had no jurisdiction, he will be tried in Yankton next month, at the same term in which Crow Dog, murderer of Spotted Tail, will be arraigned. Brave Bear claims to be a son-in-law of Sitting Bull, which is probably fiction, though he may have borne such a relation for a time, as, when the writer knew him, he had four wives, none of whom had enjoyed the felicity of his espousal more than a month. He has one Nemesis, whom he fears greatly, in the shape of a middle-aged Uncapapa squaw, deserted by him for a bach of younger brides, but unwilling meekly to accept the one-sided divorce and apt to make a large hole with a knife in his copper-colored hide if opportunity should serve.-St. Paul Pioneer Press.

A valuable Discovery and New Departure in Medical Science, an entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent Cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by the only true way, viz: Direct Application to the principal Seat of the Disease, acting by Absorption, and exerting Its specific influence on the Seminal Vesicles, Ejaculatory Ducts, Prostate Gland, and Urethra. The use of the Remedy is attended with no pain or inconvenience, and does not interfere with the ordinary pursuits of life; it is quickly dissolved and soon abserbed, producing an immediate soothing and restorative effect upon the sexual and nervous organizations wrecked from self-abuse and excesses, stopping the drain from the system, restoring the Dimness of Sight, Nervous Debility, Confusion of Ideas, Aversion to Society, etc., etc., and the appearance of premature oid age usually accompanying this trouble, and restoring perfect Ecxual Vigor, where it has been dormant for years. This mode of treatment has stood the test in very severe cases, and is now a pronounced success. Drugs are too much proscribed in these troubles, and, as many can bear witness to, with but little if any bermanent good. There is no Nonsense about this Preparation. Practical observation enables us to positively guarantee that it will give satisfaction. During the eight years that it has been in general use, we have thousands of test-monials as to its value, and it is now conceded by the Medical Profession to be the most rational means y to discovered of reaching and curing this very prevalent trouble, that is well known to be the cause of untole misery to so many, and upon whom quacks prey with their useless nostrums and big fees. For Weak Lungs and Consumption.

No preparation ever introduced to the American public, for the relief and cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Debilitated Constitutions, Weakness of the Lungs, or Consumption in the incipient or advanced stages of the disease, has ever met with the indersements of thesis as or ever met with the indorsements of physicians or patients as the celebrated "Tolu, Rock and Rye." The repeated and continued sales of the article everywhere are the best evidence of its real merits. Letters and testimonials from every quarter of the country, attesting the stimulating, tonic and healing effects, are in possession of the proprietors, and can be adduced to consider the most skept ral reader of its intrinsic vince the most skeptical reader of its intrinsic virtues. Further commendation is unnecessary and superfluous, as a trial of this article, having a pleasant taste and agreeable flavor, will satisfy all those who are afflicted or pining away with pulmonary weakness of the relief to be secured by the use of Tolu, Rock and Rye.—Chicago Times.

How to Preserve Health.

The first great secret of good health is good habits, and the next is regularity of habits. They are briefly summed up in the following rules:

1. Sleep. Give yourself the necessary amount of sleep. Some men require five hours out of the twenty-four; others need eight. Avoid feather beds. Sleep in a garment not worn during the day. To maintain robust health, sleep with a person as healthy as yourself or no one.

2. Dress. In cold weather, dress warmly with underclothing. Remove mufiler, overcoat, overshoes, etc., when remaining any considerable length of time in a warm room. Keep your feet warm and dry. Wash them in warm water two or three times a week. Wear warm stockings, large boots and overshoes when in the snow or wet. Wear a light covering on the head, keeping it

3. Cleanliness. Have always a pint or quart of water in the sleeping-room, In the morning, after washing the hands and face, then wet with the hands every part of the body. Cold water will not be disagreeable when applying it with the bare hands. Wipe immediately; follow by a brisk rubbing over the body. The whole operation need not take over five minutes. The result of this wash is, the blood is brought to the surface of the skin and made to circulate evenly through ut the body. You have opened the porcs of the skin, allowing impurities of the blood to pass off, and have given yourself in the operation a good, vigorous morning exercise. Pursue this habit regularly, and you will seldom take cold.

4. Inflation of the lungs. Five minutes spent in the open air, after dressing, inflating the lungs, by inhaling as full a breath as possible and pounding the breast during the inflation, will greatly enlarge the chest, strengthen the lung power, and effectually ward off consump-

5. Diet. If inclined to be dyspeptic, avoid mince pie, sausage and other highly seasoned food. Beware of eating too freely of soups; better to eat food dry enough to employ the natural saliva of the mouth in moistening it. If inclined to over-eat, partake freely of rice, cracked wheat and other articles that are easily digested. Eat freely of ripe fruit, and avoid excessive use of meats. Eat at regular hours, and lightly near the hour of going to bed. Eat slowly. Thoroughly masticate the food. Do not wash it down with continual drink while eating. Tell your funniest stories at the table, and for an hour afterward. Do not engage in severe mental labor directly after eating heartily.

6. Exercise. Exercise, not too violent, but sufficient to produce a gentle perspiration, should be had each day in the open air.

7. Condition of the mind. The condition of the mind has much to do with the health. Be hopeful and joyous. To be so, avoid business entanglements that may cause perplexity and anxiety. Keep out of debt. Live within your in-Grand Vice Chancllor-O. H. Fethers, come. Attend church, walk, ride, n ix in jovial company. Do as nearly right as you know how. Thus, conscience will always be at ease. If occasionally disappointed, remember that there is no rose without a thorn, and that the darkest clouds have a silver lining; that sunshine follows the storm, and beautiful spring follows the dreary winter. Do your duty and leave the rest to God, who doeth all things well.

How to Get Along.

Never stop to tell stories in business If you have a place of business, be found there when wanted.

No man can get rich sitting around stores and salcons. Never "fool" in business matters.

Have order, system, regularity, and also promptness. Do not meddle with business you know nothing about.

Do not kick every one in your path. More miles can be made in a day by going steadily than stopping. Pay as you go.

A man of honor respects his word as ie does his bond. Help others when you can, but never give when you cannot afford to, simply because it is fashionable. Learn to say no. No necessity of snapping it out dog fashion, but say it firmly and respectfully.

Use your own brains rather than those of others. Learn to think and act for yourself.

An Indiana applicant for an inspectorship of customs, after wearing an Ohio man's hat twenty-four hours, changed his mind and applied for a foreign mission.

Why is a spendthrift's purse like a hunder-cloud? Because it is conting ly light'ning.
